It was a sunny day on the Island of Sodor. Bruno was busy with his favorite activity—memorizing the train schedule.

"Kana's delivering food to the fair," he said to himself. "The rocks in Crumble Canyon are extra crumbly today. . . ."

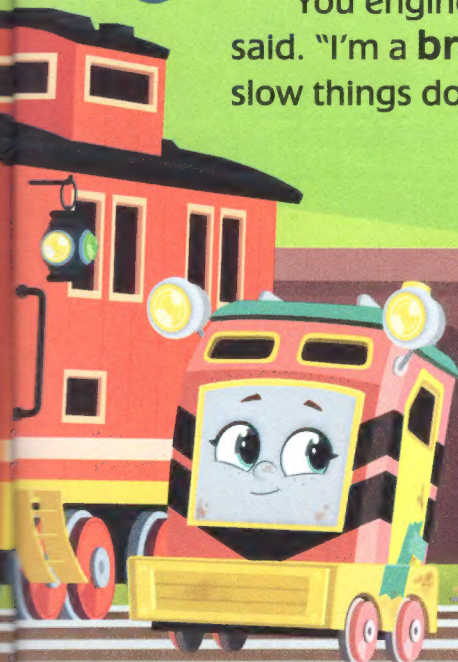

Thomas and his friends sped past, playing train tag. "Want to play?" Thomas asked Bruno.

Bruno is a yellow crane car with a large yellow boom and a blue hook. He has a blue body and yellow wheels. He is standing on the tracks, looking towards the left.

"You engines are too fast," Bruno said. "I'm a brake car. My job is to slow things down."

Just then, Gordon rolled up in a hurry. "We have an urgent delivery!" Bruno remembered the train schedule. "There are no deliveries scheduled right now," he pointed out.

"You're right," Gordon replied. "But Vicarstown Lighthouse needs a replacement light before sundown. We need someone strong and fast."

Diesel pulled up. "No one's faster and stronger than me!" he bragged. "I'm on it."

Gordon told Bruno to go with Diesel to keep him safe.
"What's the fastest route, Bruno?" Diesel asked.
"It would normally be Crumble Canyon, but—" said Bruno.
"Great!" Diesel interrupted. He coupled up with Bruno and the flatcar holding the light. Before Bruno could say another word, they were off!

Thomas saw that Diesel didn't let Bruno finish what he was saying about Crumble Canyon before they sped away. "Uh-oh," he said, worried. Thomas decided to follow them.

As Diesel approached the canyon, Bruno finished his warning. "We shouldn't go this way," he said. "There could be avalanches."

"I'm not scared of a few falling rocks!" Diesel scoffed. "I'm faster!"

Thomas followed Diesel and Bruno into the canyon. The rumbling sound of Diesel's fast wheels was loosening the rocks above.

Diesel tried to speed up, thinking he could outrun the rockslide. Bruno slammed on the brakes to stop Diesel before the rocks fell on top of them!

The sound of the screeching brakes was so loud, Bruno puffed on headphones from his stovepipe to muffle the sound!

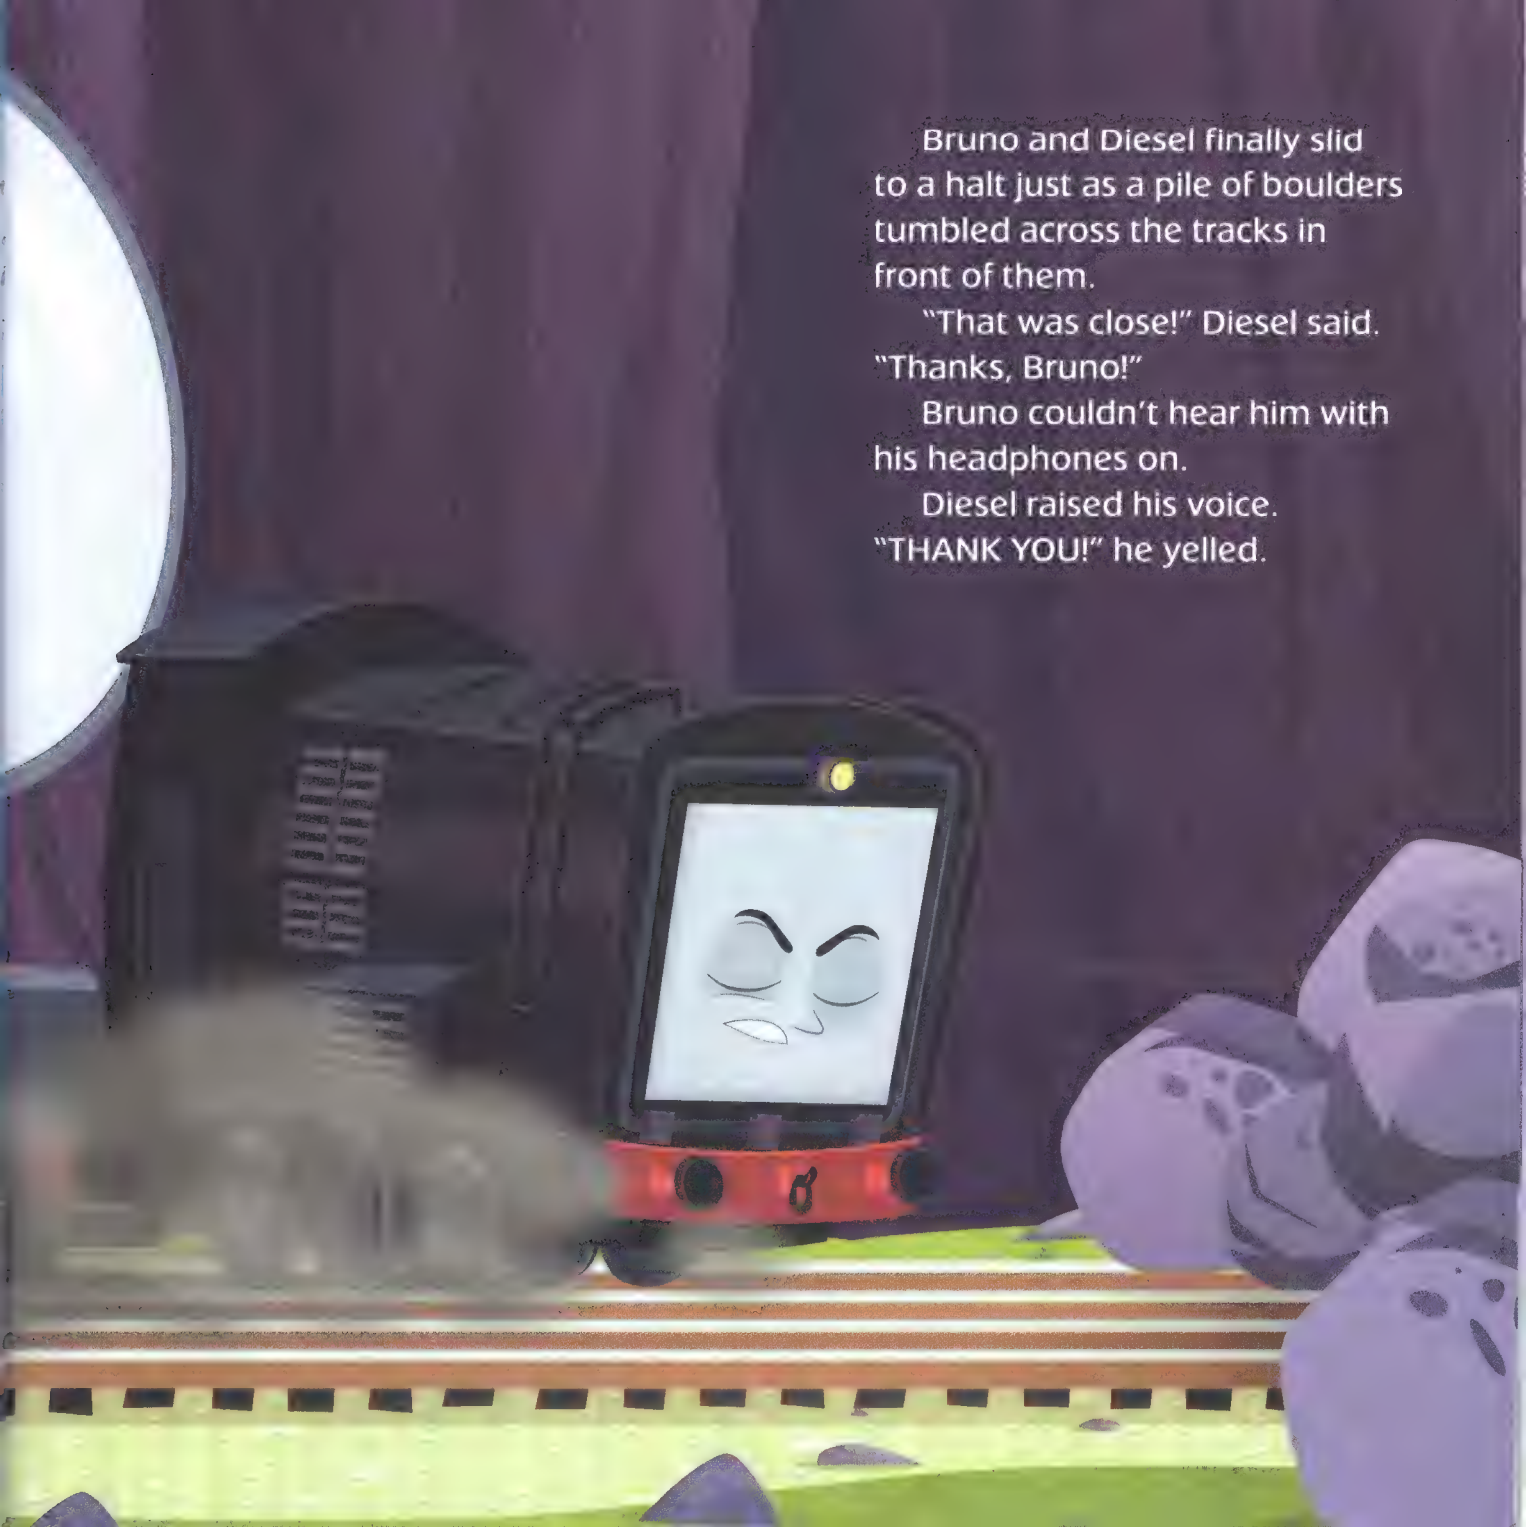

Bruno and Diesel finally slid to a halt just as a pile of boulders tumbled across the tracks in front of them.

"That was close!" Diesel said.
"Thanks, Bruno!"

Bruno couldn't hear him with his headphones on.

Diesel raised his voice.
"THANK YOU!" he yelled.

Thomas caught up to his friends as Diesel's loud voice rang through the canyon. The sound of his yell loosened even more rocks above. Thomas slammed on his brakes as they started to fall.

Thomas stopped just in time. But now an even bigger pile of boulders covered the tracks. This time it was behind Bruno and Diesel.

Luckily, they were safe—but they were trapped!

"If we're late delivering the lamp, the boats will be late delivering to the docks," Bruno said nervously.

Thomas knew Bruno loved talking about the day's deliveries. "Why don't you tell me the schedule?" Thomas suggested. As Bruno remembered everyone's schedules, he became calmer and calmer.

"I feel better," Bruno said. "But we still need to deliver this light."

"I'll go for help," Thomas said. "Sandy and Carly will be able to move these rocks." He puffed away.

"I should have listened to you, Bruno," Diesel admitted. "I have to slow down."

"Maybe I shouldn't have braked," Bruno said. "You're fast—you might have made it!"

"Trying to go fast and slow at the same time," Diesel said, laughing. "It's not the best teamwork."

"That gave Bruno an idea. 'Maybe we should go fast and slow—again!' he said. 'If the sound of my screeching brakes could loosen the rocks from above, it might loosen them from the tracks, too.'"

It was worth a try. Bruno and Diesel coupled back up. Diesel chugged forward as hard as he could. Bruno held his brakes firmly in place, holding Diesel back.

Another loud screeching sound echoed through the canyon, and the rocks around them began to rumble.

It worked! The rocks fell to either side of the tracks, clearing the way. Diesel, Bruno, and the light could finally make it out of the canyon. "Let's roll!" Diesel said.

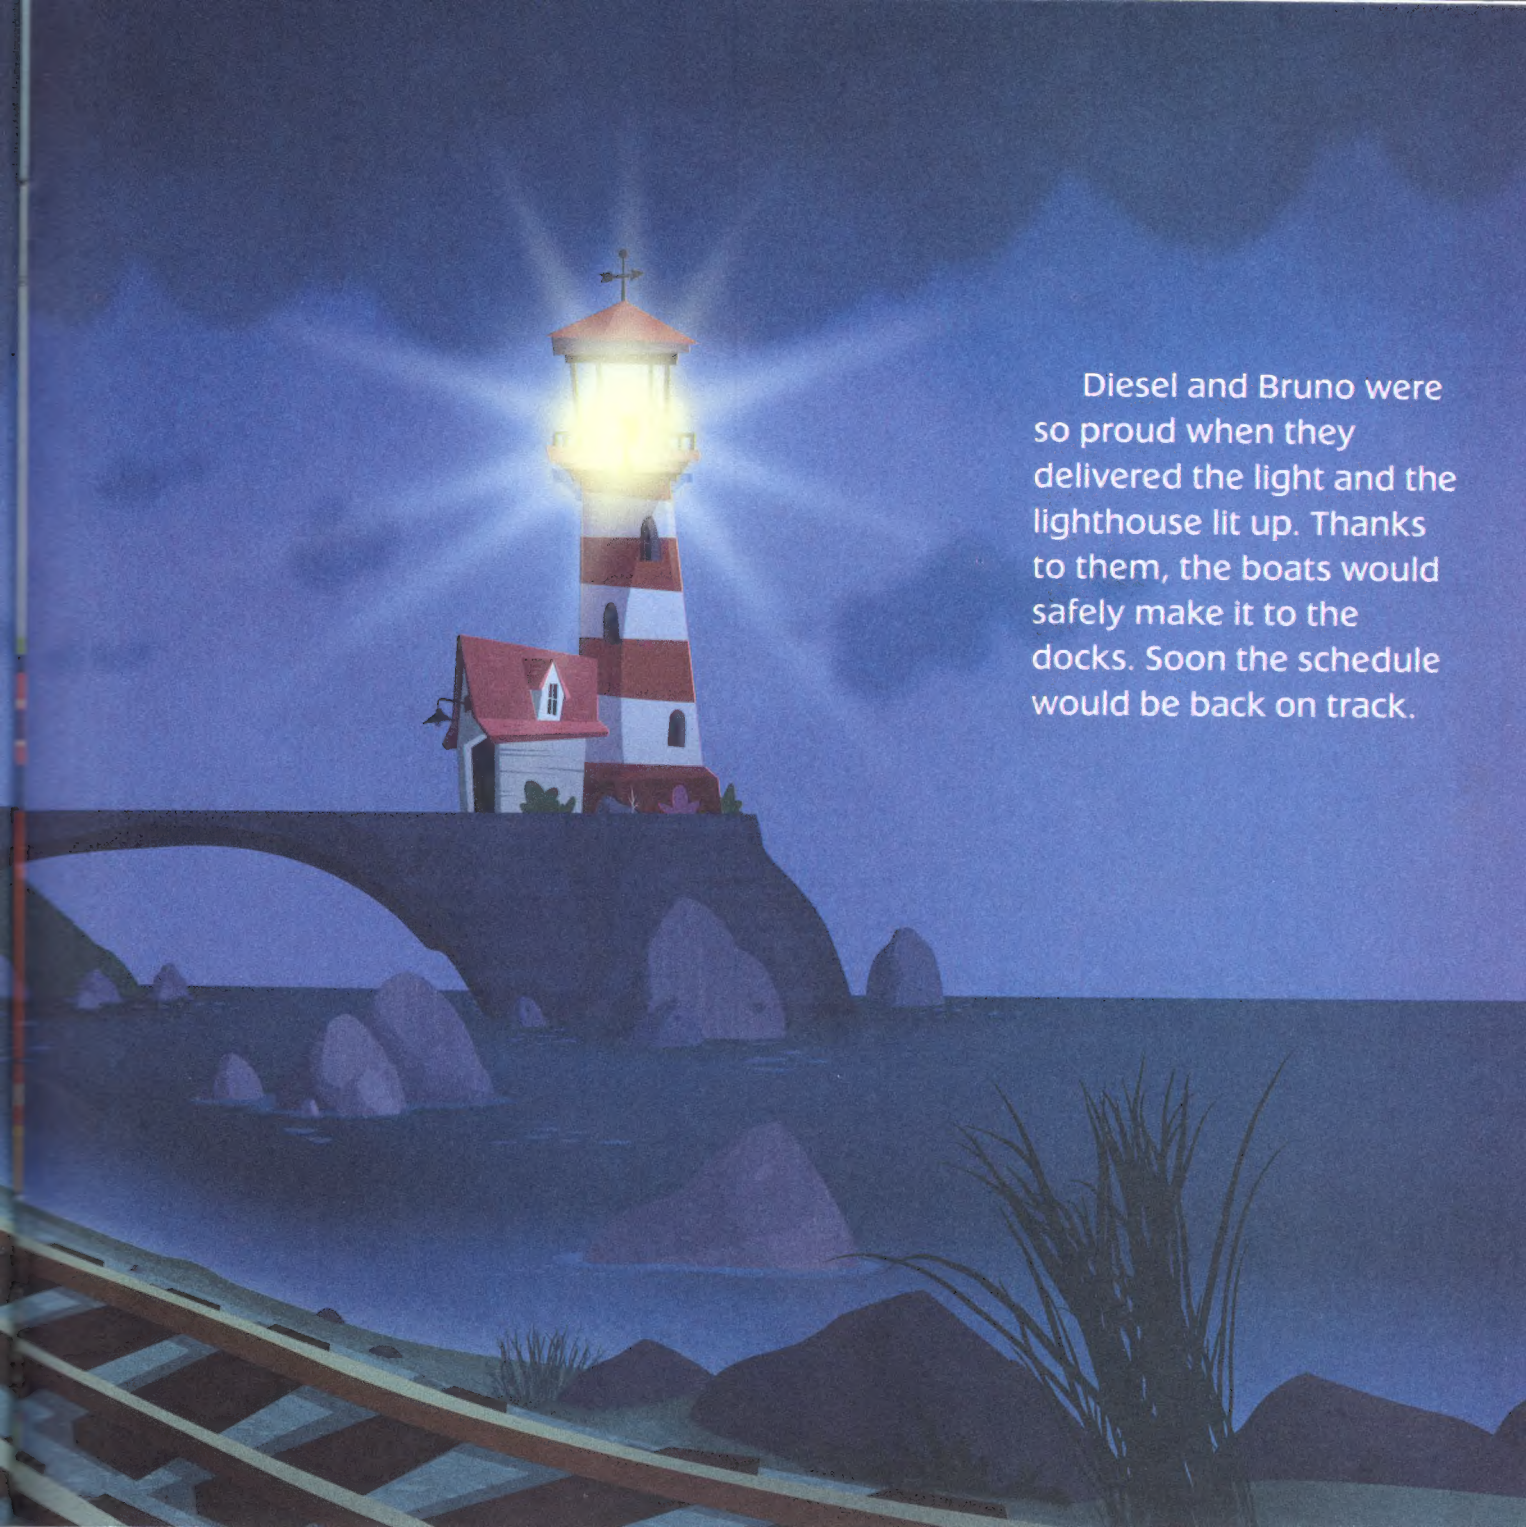

When Thomas returned to the canyon, his friends were already gone! Sandy and Carly got to work clearing away the rest of the rocks.

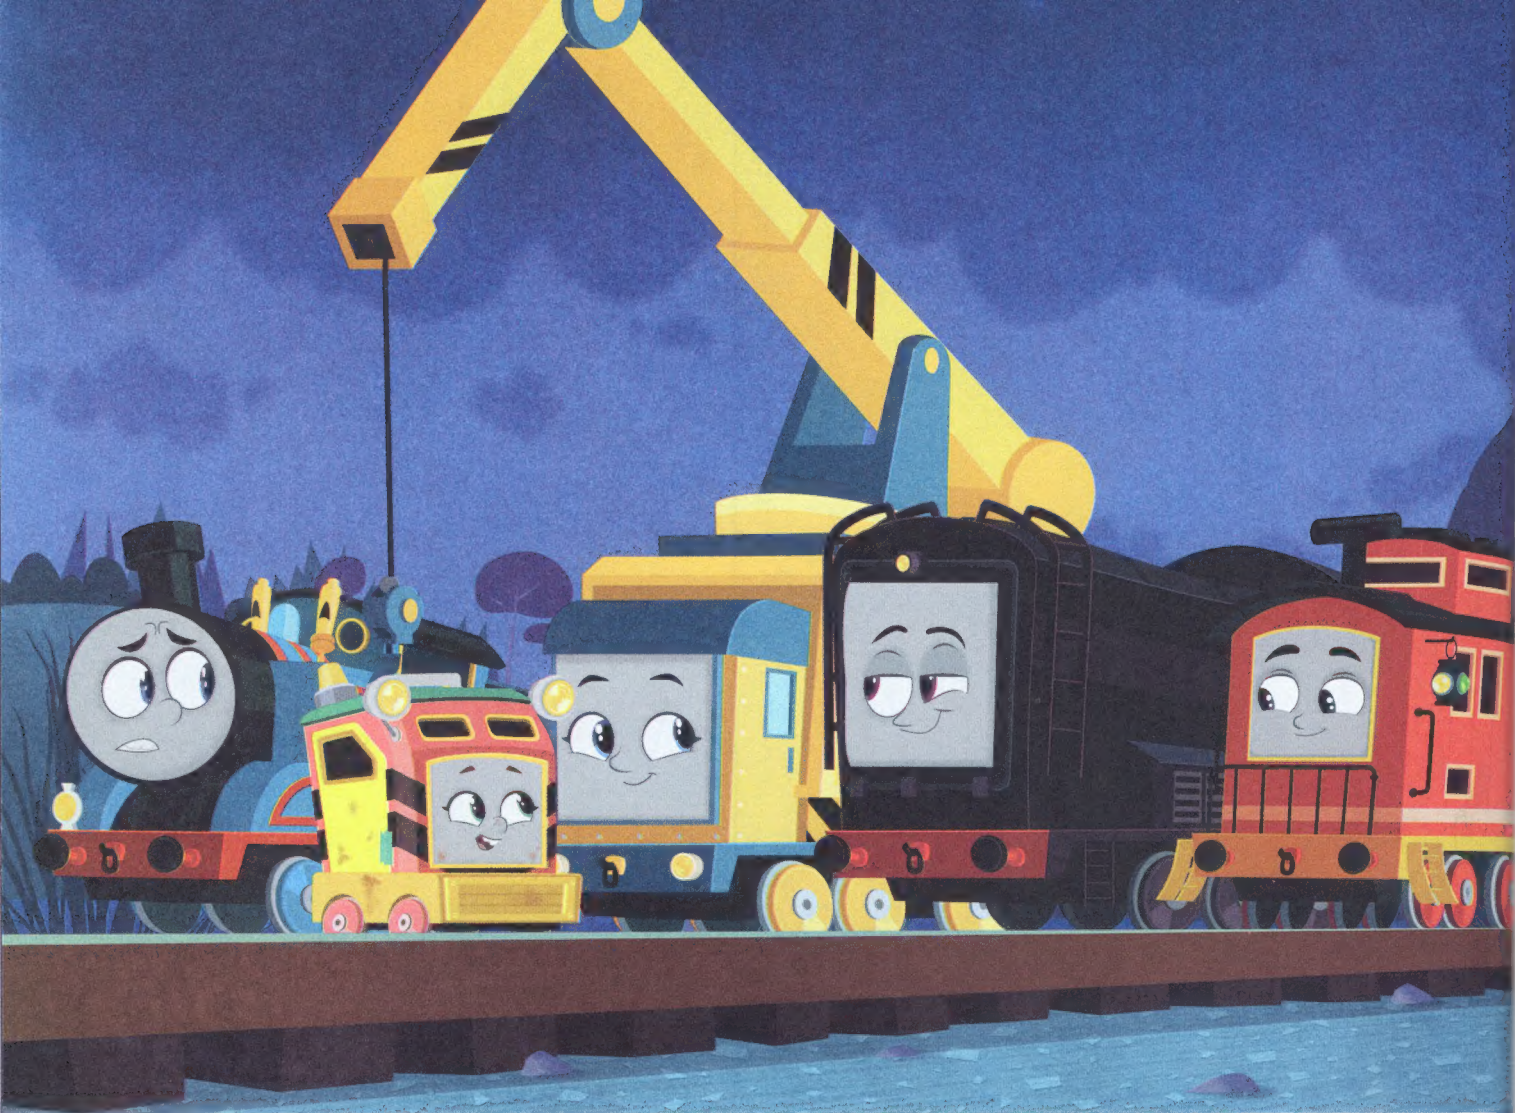

A lighthouse with a red and white striped tower and a red roof stands on a dark cliff. A small white building with a red roof is attached to the base of the lighthouse. A stone arch bridge connects the cliff to the shore. In the foreground, there are train tracks and some dark rocks. The sky is dark blue with some clouds, and the sea is dark blue. The lighthouse is lit up, and its light shines out in rays.

Diesel and Bruno were so proud when they delivered the light and the lighthouse lit up. Thanks to them, the boats would safely make it to the docks. Soon the schedule would be back on track.

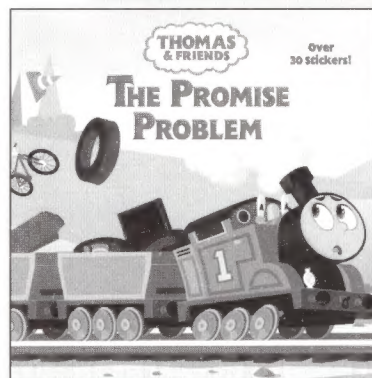

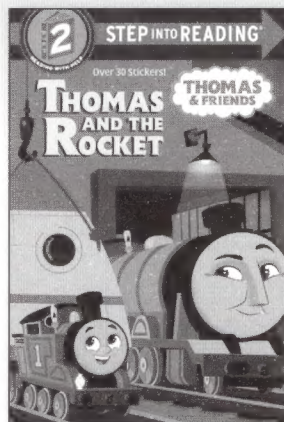

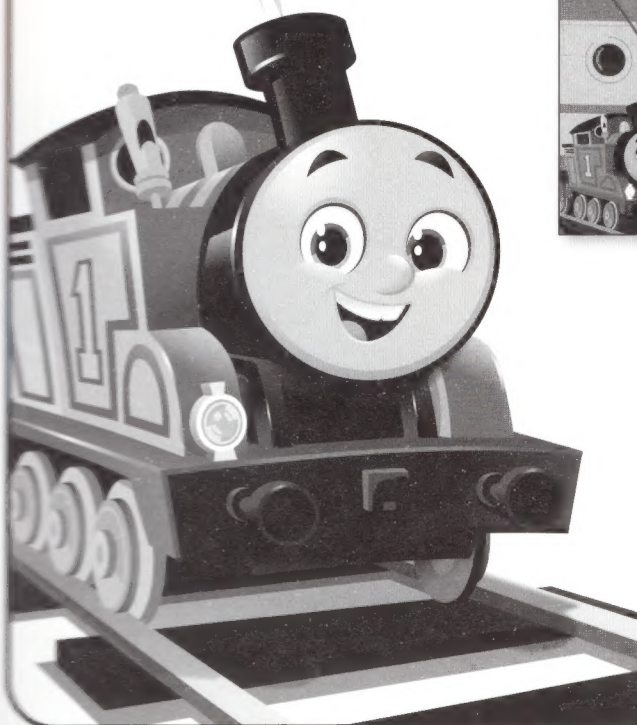

Later that night, Diesel and Bruno met up with their friends.
"You made it!" Thomas peeped. "How did you get out?"
"We went fast and slow," Bruno said.
"Yes." Diesel smiled. "We worked well together, and Bruno is great at his job!"
